Consistent with the international orientation of Lewis & Clark, the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures offers students a program of language, literature, literature in translation, and overseas study. Students learn to communicate in a foreign language, to think and read critically, and to understand values, beliefs, and cultural patterns that are different from their own. Recognizing the importance of learning the language in an environment where it is spoken, the department requires overseas study of its majors.

Courses in eight languages, including four major and three minor programs, are available for students who wish to pursue particular career or professional objectives; to continue studies in language, linguistics, and literature in graduate school; or to obtain a broad liberal arts education.

Special Programs

The foreign language departments literature and culture programs are complemented by several interdisciplinary programs. Students of Chinese or Japanese may major or minor in East Asian studies. Students of Spanish may choose an interdisciplinary minor in Latin American studies. Students of Greek or Latin may choose an interdisciplinary minor in Classical studies. (http://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/eastasianstudies/) Students of Spanish may choose an interdisciplinary minor in Latin American studies (http://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/latinafricanstudies/). Students of Greek or Latin may choose an interdisciplinary minor in Classical studies. (http://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/classicalstudies/)

Resources for Nonmajors

Students who have had no language training should begin a foreign language at the 101 level. Others who have had experience with a foreign language may take a placement examination upon entering Lewis & Clark to determine the level at which they should start their college language program. Anyone with adequate background may take any and all courses offered in that language. The department offers a linguistics course and literature courses in English translation.

The Major Programs

The department offers four major programs: French Studies, German Studies, Hispanic Studies, and Foreign Languages. Minors are offered in Chinese, Japanese, and Russian. Majors are encouraged to combine their knowledge of the language and literature of an area of the world with fields such as American and English literature, anthropology, art, communication, economics, history, international affairs, and sociology. Students should declare a major at the latest by the end of the sophomore year, at which time they choose a departmental advisor. Majors are encouraged to select an advisor as soon as possible since their major program, which includes overseas study, will require careful planning. Students who double-major select advisors in both departments. Faculty advisors provide counsel on course selection; major, minor, and general graduation requirements; international programs; careers; graduate study; and teaching assistantships. The department holds group meetings for majors at the beginning of each school year and as needed during the year.

Major Requirements: French, German, or Hispanic Studies

These majors provide courses in language, literature, and culture to prepare students for graduate study and for careers in teaching, bilingual education, translating and interpreting, or other areas in which foreign language skills are applied.
