

WORLD LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

Chair: Therese Augst

Administrative Coordinator: Blair Orfall

Consistent with the international orientation of Lewis & Clark, the Department of World Languages and Literatures offers students a program of language, literature, literature in translation, and overseas study. Students learn to communicate in a language other than English, to think and read critically, and to understand values, beliefs, and cultural patterns that are different from their own. Recognizing the importance of learning the language in an environment where it is spoken, the department requires overseas study of its majors.

Our overseas studies programs support and enhance our majors, minors, and the liberal arts mission of the college, offering students the possibility of studying a wider variety of subjects in their language than can be taught on campus.

Courses in nine languages, including four major and five minor programs, are available for students who wish to pursue particular career or professional objectives; to continue studies in language, linguistics, and literature in graduate school; or to obtain a broad liberal arts education.

Special Programs

The world languages department's literature and culture programs are complemented by several interdisciplinary programs. Students of Chinese or Japanese may major or minor in Asian studies (<https://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/asianstudies/>). Students of Spanish may choose an interdisciplinary minor in Latin American and Latino studies (<https://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/latinamericanandlatinostudies/>). Students of Greek or Latin may choose an interdisciplinary major or minor in classics (<https://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/classicalstudies/>).

Resources for Nonmajors

Students who have had no language training should begin their choice of new language at the 101 level. Others who have had experience with a language other than English, and who wish to continue their studies in that language, must take a placement examination before beginning language study at Lewis & Clark. Anyone with adequate background may take any and all courses offered in that language. The department offers a linguistics course and literature courses in English translation.

Academic English Studies (AES)

In addition, the Department of World Languages and Literatures offers nonnative English speakers the opportunity to enroll in low-intermediate through advanced English language courses while enrolled in a degree program at Lewis & Clark College.

The Major Programs

The department offers four major programs: French studies, German studies, Hispanic studies, and world languages. Minors are offered in Chinese, Japanese, and Russian, as well as French and Hispanic studies. Majors are encouraged to combine their knowledge of the language and literature of an area of the world with fields such as American and English literature, anthropology, art, communication, economics, history, international affairs, and sociology. Students should declare a major at the latest by the end of the sophomore year, at which time they choose a departmental advisor. Majors are encouraged to select an advisor as soon as possible since their major program, which includes overseas study, will require careful planning. Students who double-major select advisors in both departments. Faculty advisors provide counsel on course selection; major, minor, and general graduation requirements; international programs; careers; graduate study; and teaching assistantships. The department holds group meetings for majors at the beginning of each school year and as needed during the year.

The major provides courses in language, literature, and culture to prepare students for graduate study and for careers in teaching, bilingual education, translating and interpreting, or other areas in which world language skills are applied.

Overseas Study

All majors are required to participate in one of Lewis & Clark's international programs. Minors, while not required to study overseas, are encouraged to do so. Overseas study is the most effective way for students to improve their language skills and experience the culture they are studying.

During their time overseas, students may choose courses from a wider variety of disciplines than are available in their language of study on campus, including the humanities, the arts, the social sciences, and the sciences. With departmental approval, overseas courses taught in the target language beyond the 202 level may be applied to the major or minor. In this way, our overseas study requirement enhances the liberal arts mission of the college by offering our majors and minors the opportunity to explore diverse disciplines from within their language of study.

Chinese

The following programs fulfill the overseas requirement for the Asian studies major and the world languages major with Chinese as the primary language. All programs are highly recommended for the Chinese minor.

Academic English Studies

Academic English Studies offers nonnative English speakers the opportunity to enroll in low-intermediate through advanced English language courses while enrolled in a degree program at Lewis & Clark College. Sociocultural objectives are reflected in classroom practices designed to assist students in developing cross-cultural awareness and improving multicultural relations. Students learn how to communicate fluently and effectively in an academic setting. Through content-based language courses, they are exposed to major assumptions, knowledge, and approaches encountered within a liberal arts institution. Courses emphasize meaning and process while providing the framework for language instruction. Students read a wide variety of unadapted texts and sources, recognize and develop different writing styles and rhetorical patterns, engage in in-depth research, and develop complex analytical and critical problem-solving skills in English.

Placement

Students admitted with English test scores equivalent to or above 91 on the iBT or 7 on the International English Language Testing System (IELTS) may take the English-language assessment and receive advising on available Academic English Studies courses to take in the first semester. Taking these courses is optional for students meeting the above requirements.

Students admitted with test scores below 91 on the iBT or 7 on the IELTS are required to take the English-language assessment to determine placement in Academic English Studies courses. Depending on placement results, a student may be placed in one to two AES courses per semester in the advanced levels. Students may take one to four semesters to complete these courses, which are taken concurrently with other undergraduate coursework. Up to 24 AES credits may count toward the 128 credits needed for an undergraduate degree.

Students admitted with test scores below 79 on the iBT or 6 on the IELTS may be admitted to the pathway program. Students will be required to take the English-language assessment and will be placed in AES course levels according to results. Students in the pathway curriculum are expected to maintain a B average in their courses in the Academic English Studies program before enrolling in other College of Arts and Sciences courses. Students should consult with their AES advisors about appropriate CAS coursework before enrolling. In levels 4 and 5, students will enroll in a combination of AES courses and other CAS courses, to be determined by their AES academic advisor. Up to 24 credits of AES courses (AES 110 and above) may count toward the 128 credits needed for an undergraduate degree.

Honors

The department invites outstanding students to submit proposals for an honors project to be defined in consultation with department faculty. Students must have a GPA of 3.500 or higher in the major and overall. The program entails an independent-study research project culminating in a paper. Students must begin their projects no later than the first semester of their senior year and present them to the department by the end of the final semester. While writing their honors projects, students must be enrolled in 490 Honors Thesis for a total of 4 semester credits, credit/no credit. Credit earned for the honors project is in addition to the courses required for the major.
