Cocurricular and extracurricular activities are a source of knowledge and pleasure, allowing students to learn in ways not possible in the classroom while contributing to the benefit of the wider community. Students are encouraged to take advantage of these chances to gain insights into themselves and others, to build lasting friendships, to enjoy college life, and to acquire valuable practical experience. A sampling of such opportunities follows.

Career Center
The Career Center (https://college.lclark.edu/student_life/career_development/) helps students develop future goals and prepare for professionally enriching and personally fulfilling lives.

Through individual appointments, group programming, and other activities, the center supports students with career exploration, internship and job search planning, and graduate school applications. The center assists with resume writing and interview preparation and links students to a broad network of alumni, employers, and graduate schools.

College Outdoors
College Outdoors is one of the largest outdoor programs in North America among colleges of comparable size, offering 100 or more trips a year as well as transformative experiences that build confidence, skills, knowledge, and friendships that last a lifetime. Via a student-centered model of exploration and discovery, students are afforded the opportunity to investigate the Pacific Northwest through mostly student-led experiences that include trip planning, exploration, transportation, equipment, food, and leadership by trained student staff. Students involved in the College Outdoors program gain valuable practical experience in leadership roles, risk management, and technical outdoor skills.

College Outdoors gives the Lewis & Clark community access to the spectacular outdoor environment of the Pacific Northwest through such activities as stand-up paddleboarding, cross-country skiing, backpacking, climbing, whitewater rafting, sea kayaking, and hiking. On-campus events include classes and seminars on outdoor topics, including Wilderness First Responder, the 10-day, internationally recognized emergency-medicine certification.

Music
Music is an integral feature of life and a serious field of academic study at Lewis & Clark. A dedicated faculty of accomplished scholars, composers, and performers work in close contact with students in their chosen field. Students present more than 100 concerts, symposia, and recitals each year. Department events include student recitals, solo and ensemble performances by faculty members, programs by visiting artists and scholars, composition and electronic music program concerts, and concerts by all of the performing ensembles at Lewis & Clark. These ensembles include the Wind Symphony, Jazz Combos, Orchestra, Musical Theatre and Opera Workshop, Javanese Gamelan, Ghanaian Music Ensemble, Zimbabwean Music Ensemble, Indian Music Ensemble, Guitar Ensemble, Chamber Ensembles, Cappella Nova, Community Chorale, and Voces Auream treble choir. Participation is open to all students, not only to music majors. Additional performance opportunities are also available to students through a variety of a cappella groups, the student radio station's spring music festival, and frequent weekend concerts and dances.

Private lessons are available for all wind, brass, string, and percussion instruments; keyboard (piano, jazz piano, organ, and harpsichord); voice and jazz voice; classical, flamenco, folk, and jazz guitar; mandolin; classical and jazz saxophone; classical acoustic bass; acoustic and electric jazz bass; jazz drums; North Indian classical voice, tabla, and sitar; charango and Venezuelan cuatro; African mbira; Ghanaian drumming; shamisen; composition; and electronic music. Students may begin instrumental or vocal lessons without previous experience. The Department of Music maintains a large inventory of instruments, which are available to students enrolled in lessons or ensembles. Students of outstanding academic and musical ability are eligible for music merit scholarships. Consult the Department of Music for details.

Speech and Debate
The speech and debate (https://college.lclark.edu/departments/rhetoric_and_media/department/opportunities/forensics/) squad at Lewis & Clark is open to any full-time student in good standing. Lewis & Clark participates in individual speaking events, Lincoln-Douglas debate, and British Parliamentary debate. The squad travels regionally and nationally to attend tournaments. Lewis & Clark's program has seen success in both speech and debate, consistently sending students to the National Speech and Debate Tournament (https://speechanddebate.org/nationals/) and the National Forensic Association (https://sites.google.com/site/nationalforensicsassociation/) Championship Tournament. The program also supports an active on-campus and community public forum, including outreach to incarcerated individuals at the Oregon State Penitentiary.

Speech and debate is a cocurricular activity sponsored by the Department of Rhetoric and Media Studies (https://docs.lclark.edu/undergraduate/communication/). Students should consult the department regarding prerequisites for earning academic credit while participating in the program.

Recreation and Intramural Sports
Lewis & Clark's recreational facilities are open for use by students, faculty, staff, and alumni. Schedules are available at lcpondiers.com. Facilities include indoor and outdoor tennis courts, a gymnasium, indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a state-of-the-art track, a well-equipped fitness center, and an all-weather synthetic playing field. For students who desire a friendly atmosphere of competition, organized intramural offerings often include three-on-three basketball, dodgeball, softball, table tennis, Ultimate Frisbee, and volleyball.

Club Sports
Lewis & Clark student-led club sports vary from year to year based on student interest. Sports that gain recognition from the Office of Student Engagement are eligible to apply for funding through the Associated Students of Lewis & Clark. The level of competition varies from sport to sport. Recent years have featured club sporting activities in lacrosse, women's rugby, sailing, men's soccer, Ultimate Frisbee, and men's volleyball.

Varsity Athletics
Approximately 350 undergraduates participate in one of the 19 varsity sports sponsored by Lewis & Clark each year. The institution fields 9 men's and 10 women's teams in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III. As a member of the Northwest
Conference (NWC), Lewis & Clark participates in one of the country’s most competitive conferences. The Pioneers have garnered many team and individual championships over their long history, giving them a strong athletics tradition.

Although membership in the NWC and NCAA III excludes the granting of scholarships based on athletic talent, Lewis & Clark does have an attractive financial aid program including academic and merit scholarships for which student-athletes, like all students, are eligible.

Student Government: The Associated Students of Lewis & Clark

The Associated Students of Lewis & Clark (ASLC) is the official body charged with speaking on behalf of students and facilitating productive communication among the undergraduate student body, faculty, administration, and Lewis & Clark community. Through its various branches and committees, ASLC assists students and student organizations by providing financial resources and institutional support, as well as creating open forums for students to actively address their concerns and voice support for campus initiatives.

All students are encouraged to engage with ASLC by voting in elections, running for elected office, joining a committee (no campaigning or election required), participating in surveys by the Auditory, or attending the weekly senate meetings.

The ASLC Cabinet comprises the president; vice president; treasurer; Student Academic Affairs Board chair; Campus Activities Board chair; Equity, Inclusion, and Justice Committee chair; engagement and outreach coordinator; student resources coordinator; and director of allocations. The chief justice, auditor, director of elections, ASLC advisor, and relevant ad-hoc committee chairs serve as nonvoting members of the Cabinet.

The ASLC Senate is an at-large body of 12 elected senators in which each position is open to all undergraduates, as well as 9 representatives from identity-focused student groups. Senate meetings are open to all Lewis & Clark community members, and students are encouraged to attend.

The Auditory creates surveys and shares its findings with the ASLC and the undergraduate student body when relevant.

The Campus Activities Board is responsible for putting together campus-wide activities and supporting students and student organizations wanting to hold events.

The Elections Committee holds elections for ASLC Senate and Cabinet positions. It is responsible for recruiting candidates, publicizing election timelines, encouraging candidate campaigning, and tracking voter turnout and ballot results.

The Engagement and Outreach Committee shares information with the student body about ASLC events and initiatives. It also collaborates with the local neighborhood association.

The Equity, Inclusion, and Justice Committee supports student-led diversity, inclusion, and social justice efforts on and off campus through grants, equity audits, and working collaboratively with the United Front (a collection of student unions/identity groups on campus).

The Finance Committee allocates grants to student initiatives that will benefit the Lewis & Clark community. It also allocates the ASLC Student Body Fee to support more than 100 student organizations. These student organizations include academic organizations and student-run symposia, club sports, international and multicultural organizations, religious and spiritual organizations, special-interest organizations, and social justice and service organizations.

The Student Academic Affairs Board employs student tutors whose services are provided to other students at no cost. It also funds student research projects and helps bring scholarly presentations to campus. The board also collaboratively oversees violations in academic policy.

The Student Resources Committee organizes and implements supportive programs to increase student access to education. Current initiatives include a digital New York Times subscription available for free to the Lewis & Clark community, a scholarship program, a discretionary fund, and an affordability newsletter.

The Student Policy Advisory Committee examines ASLC’s governing documents and protocols to ensure consistency and clarity. It also reviews schoolwide policies, amplifying student voices and advocating for student needs and interests.

Student Media

Lewis & Clark’s student media organizations are recognized and supported by the Division of Student Life. Funding for student media organizations comes from the student media fee managed by the Student Media Board. All students are welcome to join these student media organizations. Students who fulfill the necessary prerequisites may earn academic credit while participating in certain media activities; consult with the appropriate academic department or program for more information.

- The Lewis & Clark Literary Review: an annual collection of creative compositions.
- Polyglot, Journal of Foreign Languages and Cultural Expression: an annual journal featuring pieces in its writers’ various languages.
- (Pause), Journal of Dramatic Literature: an annual dramatic-arts journal that promotes the art of playwriting.
- Synergia, Journal of Gender Thought and Expression: an annual journal focused on gender issues and expression.
- The Pioneer Log: Lewis & Clark’s biweekly student newspaper reports on campus and community activities and news of interest to students, faculty, and staff. The Pioneer Log has opportunities for students interested in writing, photography, graphic design, art, editing, business, advertising, and marketing. Students may begin working for The Pioneer Log at any time during their enrollment at Lewis & Clark. Read The Pioneer Log here (http://piolog.com).
- The Collective, Journal for Social Justice: a monthly zine for student pieces centered on social justice. The zine creates an intersectional space of student expression, amplifying student voice and resistance through art.

Theatre

The Department of Theatre welcomes campuswide participation in its programs. All auditions are open to any full-time student, and the department adheres to a policy of inclusive or nontraditional casting. Students receive credit for production work.
In addition to its two faculty-directed main stage productions, the department produces a one-act festival in the fall, a senior thesis festival in the spring, a late-night performance of student-written and -directed plays each semester, open auditions for directing scenes in the fall semester, and a student-produced performance, also in the fall. The department sponsors a 2-credit course that introduces students to backstage and crew work. Other department courses provide a full range of theatre studies in acting, directing, design, playwriting, technical theatre, theatre history, and dramatic literature. There are opportunities to engage in the study and practice of all the theatre arts.

The Department of Theatre is also the home of the dance program, and there are opportunities for student-produced dance and choreography, as well as classes offering a wide range of dance training.

Department of Theatre productions in theatre and dance are a vital part of campus life, and its programs integrate majors, minors, and nonmajors alike.
